Dr. Kauff is the Director of the Clinical Cancer Genetics Program of the Duke Cancer Institute. His research interests include the role of genetic counseling on the evaluation and management of individuals with an inherited predisposition to cancer, the efficacy and impact of risk-reduction strategies performed for the prevention of hereditary cancers, and the identification of both genetic and environmental markers that may allow for tailoring of specific therapeutic strategies for individual patients at increased risk of cancer.

Credit Designation Statement: Duke University Health System Department of Clinical Education and Professional Development designates this educational activity for a maximum of 1 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)™. Physicians should claim only credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.